Parents can opt blended or distance learning for children

SARAH AL HABIBI & SIH MOHAMED RASUL

The Ministry of Education and Higher Education has announced that parents will get the option of either continuing with blended learning or switching to only distance learning completely for their children.

The Ministry has decided to continue the blended learning option with 30 percent attendance of students in classrooms following the protocol of preventive and precautionary measures to carry out safe learning amidst the pandemic.

The parents shall take final decision whether they want to continue with blended learning or opt to only distance learning completely.

The authorities will continue to assess the situation and will take actions based on relevant developments and factors.

From the beginning of part of two phase of four, the relevant authorities will continue to switch from one way of learning to another due to a lot of engagements like arrangement of transportation, health and safety department at the Ministry and handling of schedule of attendance, said Al Bashri.

The attendance or absence of students will be counted in blended learning or distance learning to ensure students are attending the lessons in schools or homes, while the presence of students will be mandatory for examinations.

Under blended learning, the students are required to attend the schools from 1 to 3 days at maximum. Distance learning does not require in-person attendance at physical schools, said Al Bashri. "The school environment is more safer. The cases of infection which were detected in some schools and classrooms took place out of the schools.

He said that 15 percent schools were closed out of the total government and private schools in the country because of COVID-19, and 1.6 percent classrooms were closed in government and private schools.

The student attendance ranged between 85 to 100 percent. However, the attendance was non-mandatory during first two weeks of the new academic year 2020-21. He said there is strict monitoring to ensure the implementation of all preventive and precautionary measures and health conditions in schools on a daily basis.

A 15-month absence, Indian lawmakers returned to Parliament yesterday with the government’s response to the coronavirus pandemic overshadowing economic and stimuliining the setting the stage for a turbulent session.

The 18-day session comes as a third wave of the Indian coronavirus surge faster than any other, with more than 92,000 new cases added yesterday, raising India’s total case count to 8.4 million. More than 79,000 people have died, the health care system. Other moves could be attempted to buy time and solve a better military contingency for weeks, dramatically cutting down deaths.

In its statement, Modi appealed to all political parties to stand together and fight the pandemic, with every Indian aware of the government’s work with China.

In the past decade, tensions in the South China Sea have been on the rise, with China asserting sovereignty over a strategically important area. The countries have been engaged in a diplomatic war and have increased naval presence in the region. The recent tension between China and India has escalated in June to a medieval standoff, with both countries deploying large numbers of troops and heavy military equipment.

The standoff has sparked concerns about the possibility of a military conflict, with both countries accusing each other of using provocative actions. The situation remains tense, with neither side showing any signs of de-escalation. The diplomatic efforts to resolve the standoff have so far been unsuccessful, with both countries continuing to demonstrate their military might in the region.

The rising tension in the region has also sparked concerns about the impact on the global economy and the security of the international supply chains. The countries are major players in the global economy, with China being the world’s second-largest economy and India being the world’s seventh-largest economy. The uncertainty surrounding the situation can have far-reaching implications for the global economy.

However, the situation has also raised concerns about the potential for a larger conflict, with both countries possessing nuclear weapons. The diplomatic efforts to resolve the standoff have so far been unsuccessful, with both countries continuing to demonstrate their military might in the region.

The Afghan government yesterday pressed for a truce in a war it said was no longer good for anyone except the Taliban, with whom it would begin talks today.

The two sides are in the early stages of meetings in Doha as the US Consolidation of Forces Agreement would bring 13,000 of its soldiers home, andarray the Taliban's response with the US-led forces. The Afghan government has always been willing to talk, but the Taliban have not responded.

The Afghan government and its allies, including the United States, have been pressing the Taliban to join talks since March, when the Taliban launched a summer offensive.

But the Taliban, who fought a 20-year war against Soviet and American forces before being defeated in 2020 US-led invasion, did not respond to the efforts of diplomats who came to the negotiating table.

The Kabul government process for the Afghan government, Abdullah Abdullah, was suggested however that the Taliban could offer a ceasefire and begin the process of jailing their fighters.

Taliban spokesman Ahmad Shujaullah said that the presence of government negotiators at the talks was a clear indication that the Taliban were achieving a ceasefire, ending the “bloodletting” and the resulting peace and stability in the area.

The US and London have been seeking a meeting of the two sides to try to bring an end to the current crisis.

The Afghan government said it would send its own delegation to the talks, which it said would be held in London.

The talks are expected to be held tomorrow, with the Afghan government saying it would begin talks today.

The US, Britain and the Taliban have all said they would be present at the talks, which are expected to be held in London.

Millions return to school in Italy after virus closure

Millions of children returned to the classroom yesterday as most schools reopened after more than six months after they were closed to curb the coronavirus pandemic.

Although some Italian schools opened earlier this week, roughly 5.6 million students from a total of eight million pupils went back to school on Monday, confirming a new reality of face masks, temperature checks and social distance.

“It’s going alright. We started the school this morning to mark the start of a new beginning for us,” Silvia Garza, principal of Rome’s St Paul’s School, said.

“I am trying to be as optimistic as possible, the children are very happy.”

Despite the warnings from the Italy has confirmed that the coronavirus has been responsible for more than 35,500 deaths, Italy has also experienced a mental health crisis for its children and young people. Teachers, school staff and parents have all expressed their concerns about the mental health of children who have been kept out of school for so long.

Daniele Montanari, head of the University of Rome’s child and adolescent psychiatry department, said: “I have seen first-hand the damage that the virus has caused to children’s mental health. It has been catastrophic.”

In Italy, the government has announced that schools will stay open throughout the winter, with no plans to close them again until the summer.

Ahead of the return to school, the Italian authorities have introduced a range of measures to ensure the safety of students and staff.

Mr Montanari said: “We have to ensure that the return to school is a safe one. We have to make sure that children feel safe and that they can return to their normal lives.”

Despite the challenges, Mr Montanari said that he was optimistic about the future. “I believe that the return to school will be a success,” he said.

He added: “I am confident that we will be able to provide a safe and healthy environment for students.

Putin has long called for full unification with Belarus, while Russia dwarfs Belarus, with Russia’s population of about 12 million, and provides it with a strong military and economic link with the region.

Belarus, which supports Putin, has called for closer ties and an open border until unification with Belarus, while the two countries have been described as a “union state” with Russia as the “elder brother”.

Hurricane Sally threatens US Gulf Coast; offshore oil wells, ports shut

Energy companies, ports and refineries yesterday raced to shut down as Hurricane Sally bore down on the central US Gulf Coast, the second significant hurricane to threaten oil and gas activity over the last month.

Sally was upgraded to a hurricane yesterday by the National Hurricane Center (NHC) and is expected to shift east towards Mississippi, likely sparing some of Louisiana's refining operations.

The NHC said Sally's trajectory has shifted eastwards towards Mississippi, likely sparing some of Louisiana's refining operations.

In Mississippi, lawmakers have been discussing whether to raise the gas tax.
Trump stresses forest management over climate change as wildfires rage

WASHINGTON —

The wildfires sweeping the west coast states assumed centre stage Tuesday when the forest service launched a major new campaign, addressing the threats from climate change and land management for its firefighters and the beleaguered citizens of the Rim Fire.

The Trump administration's new campaign comes as the number of wildfires in the west has skyrocketed, with more than 30 million acres burned this year and more than 200,000 acres burned in the past month.

US President Donald Trump addressed California Governor Gavin Newsom during a briefing at wildfires in McCullom, California, yesterday.

“I want to make sure that everyone is aware of the devastation that is already taking place,” he told Newsom.

US Forest Service Administrator whisked a group of relatives and friends to a new fire center, where he was met by a sign that read “Welcome to the new era of wildfire management.”

The sign, which featured a picture of the Rim Fire, was accompanied by a message that read, “The forest service is working to protect lives, homes, and property from wildfires.”

Trump then addressed the group, saying that he had been watching the fires with great concern and was determined to do everything in his power to prevent them from spreading.

He was joined by US Forest Service Administrator Chris Gerish, who praised the president for his leadership and said that the agency was doing everything in its power to prevent the fires from getting out of control.

Gerish thanked the president for his support and said that the agency was working hard to keep the fires contained.

The Rim Fire began on August 20, 2013, and quickly grew to become one of the largest wildfires in the state's history. More than 200,000 acres were burned in the first few days, and the fire eventually burned more than 270,000 acres.

The fire was driven by strong winds and extreme drought conditions, and it rapidly grew to become one of the largest wildfires in the state's history.

The Rim Fire was contained in early September, but the damage it caused was extensive. More than 200 homes were destroyed, and thousands of acres of forest were burned.

The Rim Fire is not the only large wildfire currently burning in California. The Mendocino Complex Fire, which began in early July, has burned more than 200,000 acres and forced the evacuation of more than 25,000 people.

The Mendocino Complex Fire is one of the largest wildfires in the state's history, and it is currently burning out of control.

The Trump administration has been criticized for its approach to wildfire management, and it has been accused of cutting funding for wildfire prevention and mitigation.

The White House has denied these accusations, saying that it is doing everything in its power to prevent wildfires from getting out of control.

However, some experts have said that the administration's approach is not working, and that more needs to be done to prevent wildfires from getting out of control.
